If someone is reclaiming the vehicle on your behalf

As the registered keeper or owner of a seized vehicle you are legally responsible for it. You should attend the designated police station in person, unless you can provide evidence that you're out of the country or there are compelling medical or compassionate circumstances that prevent you from collecting your vehicle.

If you nominate someone to collect the vehicle on your behalf, the nominated person must present the correct documents to reclaim the vehicle (listed above) plus the following:

- a letter of authority – a letter signed by you authorising your nominated person to collect the vehicle on your behalf
- a copy of your passport or driving licence – so we can verify your signature on the letter of authority

If the person who's collecting your vehicle will be driving it, they'll need a valid certificate of insurance that allows them to reclaim a seized vehicle and drive it from the recovery agent's garage. The nominated driver should normally be named as an additional driver on the registered keeper's policy. Contact your insurer if there's any doubt about insurance cover.
